Internationality and cooperation

The TiHo is highly committed to the international development of veterinary medicine sciences. In addition, the university maintains scientifically-oriented contacts and official partnerships with numerous foreign universities. These relationships and international exchange programs allow for a stimulating exchange of students and scientists as well as manifold joint research projects.

Within the framework of the admission restriction, a large number of foreign students study at the TiHo. The TiHo offers insight into all fields of veterinary medicine to the foreign trainees and guest students. Alumni programs to promote internationalization and stronger involvement of students from developing and transition-economy countries have been established.

TiHo partner universities are located in these countries.
